KEPHART TESTIFIES HE DIRECTED THAT ENTRIES BE MADE

Special Deputy Fox Is Personally Conducting
Examination of Former
State Treasurer.

THAT IT ALRIGHT

Harrisburg, Pa., June 19.—Former State Treasurer Harmon M. Kephart testified in the hearing of the Treasury investigation here today that he had directed the transfer of State funds in and out of a bank during the close of one month and the beginning of the next so that the monthly statement would not show an over deposit. Edward J. Fox, Special Deputy Attorney General, in charge of the investigation for the Attorney General's Department, assumed charge of the questioning of Kephart. Kephart readily admitted under examination, that he gave orders to Oscar Klopp, now dead, to make transfers reducing excess deposits in certain banks. He denied authorizing the so-called "book transfers." Kephart said that up until the time of the investigation he supposed Klopp had made equal transfers. "I thought it was done right," he said. He said he had never examined the books to ascertain whether or not actual transfers were made. Mr. Klopp was one of the most efficient men in the department testified Kephart, in denying he had ever instructed the clerk to make book transfers. "I signed without reading the oath affixed to the agreement," Kephart said.

HUGHES PLEADS FOR SANE DISCUSSION OF NATION'S AFFAIRS

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 19.—The greatest difficulty at present in the country in the foreign relations lies in the untruthful, prejudice and inflammatory discussions in which some of our citizens and certain forms of the press permit themselves to indulge. Secretary of State Hughes said here today in a commencement day address at the University of Michigan. He characterized as the most dangerous enemy of the republic the demagogue and all his works. Hughes in an outline of the American foreign policy also urged that Cabinet members be allowed to appear on the floors of Congress to explain the affairs of their departments stating that such misunderstanding regarding foreign relations could be wiped out in this manner.

FLANNERY PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 19.—J. J. Flannery, Hazlewood undertaker, pleads not guilty today when arraigned for trial on a charge of slaying his wife on the morning of February 13th when he returned from his club. Flannery shot and killed his wife in mistake for a burglar, he declared. The prosecution asserts it has evidence to prove that the shooting was premeditated.

MAKES 1,000 MILES A DAY

Chicago, June 18.—"Always late" is the way his wife describes John O'Reilly, of Elkhart, Ind., who has served as engineer on the Twentieth Century for 20 years and who has the reputation of invariably bringing his train in on time. O'Reilly admits it is easier to get his train to New York and Chicago on time than it is to quit his little Elkhart garden when the missus says supper is ready. He is a speed demon when he's on the job, but slow and easy in his method when off duty. "I never liked to go fast," says O'Reilly. "I once walked to a big fire."

SEA TIGER CAUSES DEATH OF EXPERT FLORIDA SWIMMER

Tampa, Fla., June 19.—Terrors of a tiger of the sea kept bathers in Florida waters close to shore today following a tragedy in which Miss Doris McKatchie, a champion swimmer, was bitten by a shark. Miss McKatchie, a companion of Miss Mary Buhner, companion of Miss McKatchie, is deserving of a Carnegie hero medal for her action in trying to save the life of her friend. She swam out to her assistance and held the dying girl in her arms after the shark had made its attack and inflicted two deep wounds in the girl's leg. The wounds proved fatal and she died in Miss Buhner's arms. The girls were swimming in the ship channel of Tampa Bay, off St. Petersburg. Both were expert swimmers and members of a champion swimming team.

STRIKE ORDER WILL GO OUT FOR JULY 1 SAY RAIL CHIEFS

Head Of The Miners'
Organization Adds A
Bit To The Turmoil In
The Industrial World.

NOTICE IS SERVED

Cincinnati, June 18.—Formal notice was served tonight on the Railway Labor Board by the chiefs of ten unions of the intention to go through with strike July 1, in event one is authorized by the 1,225,000 workers whose wages are to be reduced by orders of the Board.

Coupled apparently with the action of the rail union leaders was a statement made by John Lewis, leader of the striking coal miners who will meet with the rail union leaders on Tuesday to consider strike action. He apparently pledged the miners' aid to rail men but declined to state definitely what aid might result.

Cincinnati, June 18.—Withdrawal of wage reductions ordered by the rail road labor board and the taking back by railroads of contracts farming out shop work only can avert the threatened strike of approximately 1,000,000 workers on July 1, rail union executives said tonight.

Union leaders declared complete strike plans have been approved and unless the railroad labor board revokes its decision cutting wages, and altering conditions, the threatened strike will go into effect as scheduled.

The triple barreled strike vote of seven unions so far returned was announced by union leaders as being 98 per cent in favor of a walkout. However leaders said this percentage is high and they did not expect the final vote to reach more than 95 per cent.

Tuesday the rail and miners' union officials will meet to discuss "co-operative action" between members of these organizations. John L. Lewis, president of the miners, formally announced today that the meeting would discuss "industrial situation affecting the strike of organized mine workers and outrageous action of the United States Railway Labor Board in imposing unwarrantable and unjustified."

REDISTILLATION OF PATENT MEDICINES TROUBLES OFFICERS

Philadelphia, J.P., June 19.—(U. P.)—Illicit Boozing in this state is chiefly from two sources, according to State Prohibition Director Davis.

"There is no question that liquor is being smuggled here by boat and also illegally transported by truck and freight from other states," he said.

"But the most damnable source of it is the enormous shipments of 'Alcorub' and 'Alcosh' and other preparations containing more than 80 per cent alcohol, which is being sold indiscriminately in the market today. Bootleggers buy the poisonous alcohol in carload lots, re-distill it, and sell it for beverage purposes. "We can handle the liquor withdrawn from distilleries and government bonded warehouses but the alcohol situation is out of our jurisdiction. This state is flooded with the poison rum, and the drinking public pays fabulous prices for colored alcohol. Poison lurks in every glass. Scientists tell us that it is impossible to remove all the poison through a re-distilling process."

ALL LIQUORS WILL BE CONCENTRATED IN FEW BUILDINGS

Washington, D. C., June 19.—Orders for the concentration in a few warehouses of all liquors now held in three hundred and four warehouses throughout the country were issued today by Prohibition Commissioner Haynes. FREE J1eb smay onKmbH

American Legion Band Should Be Supported By Every Loyal Citizen of Clearfield

Some few weeks ago a campaign was begun by friends of the American Legion Band to raise sufficient funds to pay some outstanding obligations and supply a maintenance fund for the band. Considerable work was done by the solicitors and a fair-sized sum of money and pledges were secured. The entire town was not covered and the committee propose completing their labors this week.

The American Legion Band is one of the very finest musical organizations to be found in Central Pennsylvania and is an institution which reflects great credit upon our town and should be appreciated by all Clearfielders. While organized by, and part of John Shade Post of the American Legion, the Legion should not be expected to share the burden of maintaining the band. It is a town institution and as such should be supported by the town. Nevertheless obligations of the band to the amount of $1500 have been assumed by the Legion and the campaign for finances were undertaken by some of our public spirited men for the purpose of taking this burden off the Legion and to give all the townspeople an opportunity to assist in supporting our band.

With the end in view of giving the supporters of the band proper recognition it was decided to make all contributors honorary members of the band. Honorary membership certificates were prepared and the fees for same were placed at $10, $25, $50 and $100. When the subscriber made his donation a certificate was issued of a denomination the amount of his contribution and this certificate denoting honorary membership was placed in a neat frame for delivery to the honorary member, the idea being to have the certificate displayed in office, business place or home, to show just who did appreciate having a good band in Clearfield, and who was willing to show their appreciation by helping to support it.

The expenses of the band are approximately $1500 per year and every person interested in the Legion and its institutions should be glad to have their names placed upon the honorary membership roll.

The committee will complete its labors this week, when a complete report will be given. If the solicitation to Russell Shaw, at Blacktown, have missed you send your contributions floral store on Third street, where it will be properly recorded and the certificate of honorary membership supplied.

Bonus Must Wait Until Tariff Bill Passes, Committee Decides

Washington, D. C., June 19, 1922.—The fate of the soldier bonus at this session was today in the hands of fifty-nine Republican Senators who met in secret session to decide what action the upper house will take. Compromises between opposing forces practically assured indefinite delay at this session of Congress. It is understood that a majority has been swayed to the Administration view-point that the bonus must follow the tariff and that the former will surely be brought to a vote before fall.

Washington, D. C., June 19.—Soldier bonus legislation will not be considered until the tariff bill is disposed of, it was decided at a conference of Republican Senators today.

By a vote of thirty to nine the conference defeated a motion by Senator McCumber, North Dakota, Chairman of the Finance Committee, to lay aside the tariff and take up the bonus for immediate consideration.

After defeating McCumber's motion, however, the conference passed a resolution twenty-seven to eleven pledging to consider the bonus as soon as the tariff was completed.

COMMITTEE READY TO ENTERTAIN THE COMMERCIAL CLUB

The committee of the Commercial Club having in charge the dinner and entertainment for Ladies night which will be observed at the Dimeling this evening report everything in readiness for a wonderful social time. This is the first social event of the Commercial Club since its organization and with Doctor Frantz at its head it is bound to be one of the successes of the season.

The club now numbers almost one hundred members and judging from the way acceptances are rolling in, there will be almost one hundred per cent attendance this evening and the committee is preparing for it so members are urged to be there to do their duty by the chef.

CONGRESSMEN WANT TIME TO ACQUAINT NATION WITH PLAN

Washington, D. C., June 19.—A scientific and vigorous campaign to sell the ship subsidy to the country will be under way soon in case President Harding definitely consents, as he is asked to do this week to a postponement of action in the House. Republican House Leaders said today that one of their main reasons for urging President Harding to delay legislation is to allow time for comprehensive advertising scheme to acquaint the voters with the need for the proposed financial aid to American shipbuilders.

PARK DANCING FLOOR BEING PUT IN FINE SHAPE

The committee in charge of the Elk dance to be held at the Park tomorrow evening are hard at work putting the dancing floor in good condition and report today that by the time the hour of the dance rolls around it will be in great shape. The floor is being planed, polished and leveled and all who attend will be assured a good time.

UNUSUAL TRIBUTE IS PAID TO ROTHROCK, FATHER OF FORESTRY

Harrisburg, Pa., June 19.—(U. P.)—An unusual tribute was paid to the late Dr. Joseph Trimble Rothrock, first Forestry Commissioner of Pennsylvania, by the State Forest Commission in resolutions eulogizing his services to the State and to society.

In addition plans are being developed for placing memorials to Dr. Rothrock, including a medallion in the Department offices, a bust at the Forest Academy, and a monument in the public square of his birthplace, McVeytown, in Mifflin County.

The resolution says: "WHEREAS, Dr. Joseph Trimble Rothrock, the beloved father of Pennsylvania Forestry, has passed to his reward; and

"WHEREAS, it is fitting that his former colleagues on the Pennsylvania State Forest Commission give expression to their high appreciation of his long life of devotion to the cause of forest protection;

"RESOLVED, That the members of the Pennsylvania State Forest Commission, whose work was laid out and started by his genius and unselfish efforts, touched with a deep and lasting grief at his loss:

RESOLVED, That while the great leader is gone, his work in all its manifold phases will go unabated. His career as the founder of the Pennsylvania Forestry Department, as the first to propose the State outdoor treatment of tuberculosis, as the founder in this State of the outdoor camp and school movement; for boys as a discoverer of Pennington, as the discoverer of valuable formulas in surgery, as the reporter of new and rare specimens in botany, and natural history, and as an explorer and pathfinder, and also for his kindness, his approachable simplicity, and above all his splendid sincerity, have marked him as a man apart and a great soul, worthy of undying fame; this country can scarce part with his type.

Punxsutawney Curb Market Continues To Draw A Crowd

That the Punxsutawney curb market will eventually become an institution of established worth in Punxsutawney becomes more apparent each week says the Punxsutawney Spirit. Saturday's market brot out a large number of farmers and truck gardeners than any previous market and the number of purchasers was correspondingly large.

Fifteen stalls were occupied before the market opened this morning and before 8 o'clock practically every bit of produce offered for sale had been snapped up by eager buyers. Chickens, butter, eggs and garden produce of all kinds and one farmer who thought he was equipped for at least three hours of hard selling found himself bought out in less than an hour's time.

It has been suggested that the men who occupy stalls at the curb market Wednesday and Saturday of each week by some means indicate what they will have to offer at the next market. Now anything will sell if it is good quality and the price is right but if the prospective purchaser were acquainted beforehand with what was to be offered for sale, the produce would in all probability move faster. Wednesday next will be the next day of the market, and more farmers are expected to be on hand than at any time since the market opened.

Salem and vicinity was greatly shocked and surprised on Saturday to hear of the tragedy surrounding the disappearance of Emma Wise, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. The telegram, apprising them of the death of their daughter came from the Hotel Tours, at Denver, Col., and told first of her disappearance, and later of the finding of her body, murdered. The last telegram also conveyed the news that the alleged slayer of the woman had been found and had made a partial confession of his crime.

The telegrams from the Hotel Tours at Denver, are as follows:

J. W. LIGGETT

Emma Wise left her home in Salem last November for the purpose of opening a millinery establishment in Denver, Colo. This she did and was getting along very well, but recently word was received from her that she had sold out her store. While conducting the store the young lady had stopped at the Hotel Tours, and it is believed from the telegrams sent by the management that the motive for the crime was robbery. The details of the crime are not yet known.

Alice Goodlander referred to is a sister of the murdered woman, and she has gone to Denver from Split Rock, Wyoming, with the intention of bringing the remains back east for burial.

The deceased was very well known in Brady township and the bereaved parents will have the sympathy of a large number of friends throughout this section.

Mrs. Hiram Souders, of Albany, N. Y., is visiting relatives here.

He is the author of the most complete treatise on swimming "At Home in the Water" and has written hundreds of articles on the art of swimming in all leading magazines in America, Canada and England. June number of "Physical Culture" contains one of his recent publications while many of his writings have been syndicated and have appeared in the leading papers of this hemisphere.

Corzan will write some articles that will appear in this paper during the next few days, and which will contain many enlightening facts on swimming that should be of help to everyone in this Community and especially appropriate at this time of the year.

Mr. Corzan will give four exhibitions during his stay in Clearfield. These will be on June 26th, 27th, 28th and 29th, at eight o'clock in the evening. MARY MARIE

By Eleanor H. Porter

I knew then, of course, that he meant I couldn't go on the sleigh ride, even though he hadn't said the words right out. I forgot all about being casual and indifferent and matter-of-course then. I thought only of showing them how absolutely necessary it was for them to let me go on that sleigh ride, unless they wanted my life forevermore hopelessly blighted.

I explained carefully how he was the handsomest, most popular boy in school, and how all the girls were just crazy to be asked to go anywhere with him; and I argued what if Father had seen him with boys he did not like—then that was all the more reason why nice girls like me, when he asked them, should go with him, so as to keep him away from bad boys. And I reminded them again that he was the very handsomest, most popular boy in school; and that there wasn't a girl I knew who wouldn't be crazy to be in his shoes.

Then I stopped, all out of breath, and I can imagine just how pleading and palpitating I looked.

I thought Father was going to refuse right away, but I saw the glance that Mother threw him—the glance that said, "Let me attend to this, dear." I'd seen that glance before, several times, and I knew just what it meant; so I wasn't surprised to see Father shrug his shoulders and turn away as Mother said to me:

"Very well, dear. I'll think it over and let you know tonight."

But I was surprised that night to have Mother say I could go, for I'd about given up hope, after all that talk at the breakfast table. And she said something else that surprised me, too. She said she'd like to know Paul Mayhew herself; that she always wanted to know the friends of her little girl. And she told me to ask him to call the next evening and play checkers or chess with me.

Happy? I could scarcely contain myself for joy. And when the next evening came, bringing Paul, and Mother, all prettily dressed as if he were really, truly company, came into the room and talked so beautifully to him, I was even more entranced. To be sure, it did bother me a little that Paul laughed so much, and so loudly, and that he couldn't seem to find anything to talk about only himself, and what he was doing, and what he was going to do. Some way, he had never seemed like that at school. And I was afraid Mother wouldn't like that.

All the evening I was watching and listening with her eyes and her ears everything he did, everything he said. I so wanted Mother to like him! I so wanted Mother to see how really fine and splendid and noble he was. But that evening—why couldn't he stop talking about the prizes he'd won, and the big racing car he'd just ordered for next summer? There was nothing fine and splendid and noble about that. And were his finger nails always so dirty?

Why, Mother would think—Mother did not stay in the room all the time; but she was in more or less often to watch the game; and at half-past nine she brought in some little cakes and lemonade as a surprise. I thought it was lovely; but I could have shaken Paul when he pretended to be afraid of it, and asked Mother if there was a stick in it.

The idea—Mother! A stick! I just knew Mother wouldn't like that. But if she didn't, she never showed a thing in her face. She just smiled, and said no, there wasn't any stick in it; and passed the cakes.

When he had gone I remember I didn't like to meet Mother's eyes, and I didn't ask her how she liked Paul Mayhew. I kept right on talking fast about something else. Some way, I didn't want Mother to talk then, for fear of what she would say.

And Mother didn't say anything about Paul Mayhew—then. But only a few days later she told me to invite him again to the house (this time to a chafing-dish supper), and to ask Carrie Heywood and Fred Small, too. We had a beautiful time, only again Paul Mayhew didn't "show off" at all in the way I wanted him to—though he most emphatically "showed off" to his way! It seemed to me that he bragged even more about himself and his belongings than he had before. And I didn't like at all the way he ate his food. Why, Father didn't eat like that—with such a noisy mouth, and such a rattling of the silverware!

And so it went—wise mother that she was! Far from prohibiting me to have anything to do with Paul Mayhew, she let me see all I wanted to of him, particularly in my own home. She let me go out with him, properly chaperoned, and she never, by word or manner, hinted that she didn't admire his conceit and braggadocio.

And it all came out exactly as I suspect she had planned from the beginning. When Paul Mayhew asked to be my escort to the class reception in June, I declined with thanks, and immediately afterward told Fred Small I would go with him. But even when I told Mother nonchalantly, and with carefully averted eyes, that I was going to the reception with Fred Small—even then her pleasant "Well, that's good!" conveyed only cheery glances interest; nor did a hasty glance into her face discover so much as a lifted eyebrow to hint, "I thought you'd come to your senses sometime!"

Wise little mother that she was! In the days and weeks that followed (though nothing was said) I detected a subtle change in certain matters, however. And as I look back at it now, I am sure I can trace its origin to my "affair" with Paul Mayhew. Evidently Mother had no intention of running the risk of any more courtships; also evidently she intended to know who my friends were. At all events the old Anderson mansion soon became the rendezvous of all the boys and girls of my acquaintance. And such good times as we had, with Mother always one of us, and ever proposing something new and interesting!

And because boys—not a boy, but boys—were as free to come to the house as were girls, they soon seemed to me as commonplace and matter-of-course and free from sentimental interest as were the girls.

Again, wise little mother! But, of course, even this did not prevent my falling in love with some one older than myself, some one quite outside of my own circle of intimates. My especial attack of this kind came to me when I was barely eighteen, the spring I was being graduated from the Andersonville High school. And the visible embodiment of my adoration was the head master, Mr. Harold Hartshorn, a handsome, clean shaven, well-set-up man of (I should judge) thirty-five years of age, rather grave, a little stern, and very dignified.

But how I adored him! How I hung upon his every word, his every glance! How I maneuvered to win from him a few minutes' conversation on a Latin verb or a French translation! How I thrilled if he bestowed upon me one of his infrequent smiles! How I grieved over his stern aloofness!

By the end of a month I had evolved this: his stern aloofness meant that he had been disappointed in love! his melancholy was loneliness—his heart was breaking! How I longed to help to heal, to cure! How I thrilled at the thought of the love and companionship I could give him somewhere in a rose-embowered cottage far from the maddening crowd! (He boarded at the Andersonville hotel alone now.) If only he could see it as I saw it. If only by some sign or token he could know of the warm love that was his but for the asking! Could he not see that no longer need he pine alone and unappreciated in the Andersonville hotel? Why, in just a few weeks I was to be through school. And then—

On the night before commencement Mr. Harold Hartshorn ascended our front steps, rang the bell, and called for my father. I knew because I was upstairs in my room, over the front door; and I saw him come up the walk and heard him ask for Father.

Oh, joy! Oh, happy day! He knew. He had seen it as I saw it. He had come to gain Father's permission, that he might be a duly accredited suitor, for my hand! During the next ecstatic ten minutes, with my hand pressed against my wildly beating heart, I planned my wedding dress, selected with care and discrimination my trousseau, furnished the rose-embowered cottage far from the maddening crowd—and wondered why Father did not send for me. Then the slam of the screen door downstairs sent me to the window, a sickening terror within me.

Was he going—without seeing me, his future bride? Impossible!

Father and Mr. Harold Hartshorn stood on the front steps below, talking. In another minute Mr. Harold Hartshorn had walked away, and Father had turned back on to the piazza.

As soon as I could control my shaking knees, I went downstairs. Father was in his favorite rocking-chair. I advanced slowly. I did not sit down.

"Was that Mr. Hartshorn?" I asked, trying to keep the shakiness out of my voice.

"Yes."

"Mr. H. Hartshorn," I repeated sturdily.

"Yes. He came to see me about the Downer place," nodded Father. "He wants to rent it for next year."

"To rent it—the Downer place!" (The Downer place was no rose-embowered cottage far from the maddening crowd! Why, it was big, and brick, and right next to the hotel! I didn't want to live there.)

"Yes—for his wife and family. He's going to bring them back with him next year," explained Father.

"His wife and family!" I can imagine about how I gasped out those four words.

"Yes. He has five children, I believe, and—"

But I had fled to my room.

After all, my recovery was rapid. I was in love with love, you see; not with Mr. Harold Hartshorn. Besides, the next year I went to college. And it was while I was at college that I met Jerry.

Jerry was a brother of my friend, Helen Weston. Helen's elder sister was a senior in that same college, and was graduated at the close of my freshman year. The father, mother and brother came on to the graduation. And that is where I met Jerry.

If it might be called meeting him. He lifted his hat, bowed, said a polite nothing with his lips, and an indifferent "Oh, some friend of Helen's," with his eyes, and turned to a radiant blonde senior at my side.

And that was all—for him. But for me—

All that day I watched him whenever opportunity offered; and I suspect that I took care that opportunity offered frequently. I was fascinated. I had never seen any one like him before. Tall, handsome, brilliant, at perfect ease, he plainly dominated every group of which he was a part. Toward him every face was turned—for he never seemed to know it. (Whatever his faults, Jerry is not conceited. I will give him credit for that!) To me he did not speak again that day. I am not sure that he even looked at me. If he did there must still have been in his eyes only the "Oh, some friend of Helen's," that I had seen at the morning introduction.

I did not meet him again for nearly a year; but that did not mean that I did not hear of him. I wonder if Helen ever noticed how often I used to get her to talk of her home and her family life; and how interested I was in her gallery of portraits on the mantel—there were two fine ones of her brother there.

Helen was very fond of her brother. I soon found that she loved to talk about him—if she had a good listener.

Needless to say she had a very good one in me.

Jerry was an artist, it seemed. He was twenty-eight years old, and already he had won no small distinction. Prizes, medals, honorable mention, and a special course abroad—all these Helen told me about. She told me, too, about the wonderful success he had just had with the portrait of a certain New York society woman. She said that it was just going to "make" Jerry; that he could have anything he wanted now—anything.

They Couldn't Know

Back in 1818 the greatest newspaper of the day, declared that the world had reached the limit of human expansion. It even went further, saying that there weren't enough supplies in the world to support further growth of population.

The mind of 1818 couldn't conceive of the miracles that human ingenuity would perform during the twentieth century. It couldn't imagine the wonders that would be wrought by new agricultural methods and modern manufacturing genius. It was ignorant of transportation as we know it, or the progressive sales methods of today. It could not see the vital part that would be played by advertising.

Even today there are some who fail to realize what an important factor advertising has become. Advertising is as much a part of today's life as electricity, anti-septic surgery or automobiles. It keeps us up-to-date on the many things we need in order to live profitable, happy and useful lives. It presents for our approval articles of all kinds and for all purposes. The requirements of each member of the family are met by advertised offers of good merchandise of proved value.

The advertisements save time, money and effort for those who read them and follow their guidance. They are practical guarantees of satisfaction.

Don't lay aside this paper without reading the advertisements

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

Union wages closed the war period at a level of 122 per cent above the level of 1909, according to a study made by the Department of Labor and now available to throw light upon this much controverted point.

The war period from the standpoint of union scales closed in 1921, because it was in that year that decrease in rates of pay began to be worked out between employers and employees. Until then wage scales experienced a continued increase. The year 1921, therefore, is regarded as the peak year, despite the fact that in the prices of commodities the peak was reached twelve months sooner.

Wages have been falling during the past few months.

Some Government officials and observers, regarded as foresighted, believe that wages will soon be turned again into increasing wage scales.

A shortage of workers is developing in many sections of the United States in some lines of endeavor. Not enough building mechanics can be found to do work required in New Jersey, some sections of New England and in large cities throughout the country. Automobile workers and machinists are in demand. Metal miners are needed in the Southwest. Wages have already begun to rise in these trades.

Experienced farm hands are at a premium in Central and Middle West and also in certain sections of new England.

Shortage of workers in these lines of work have developed directly into increased demand and increased production of the products in question.

As prosperity develops for other lines of industry, a similar situation will result, it is forecast. Immigration, which formerly supplied the United States with a large supply of common labor, is now restricted and common labor is in demand. Some observers predict that this cause alone will result in great increases in all wage scales throughout the country. Not all observers are in agreement on this question.

The accepted view is that the outlook favors higher wages generally as prosperity develops.

It is interesting to note that the most substantial increase in wages, which resulted from the war, did not come in actual war years. Between 1914 and 1918 the average level of wages increased but 29 percent. It was between 1918 and 1921 that wages rose fastest and highest.

Coal miners are not getting a living wage, Secretary of Commerce Hoover declared last Thursday. Hoover said the irregularity of coal production left coal miners idle half the time, and said their earnings when computed on an annual basis reveals they are poorly paid.

This is the first time Hoover has lent endorsement to the miner's chief claim for consideration in their present fight with the operators.

Permanent settlement of the coal strike is impossible, Hoover declared until a basis of adjustment is reached that will eliminate the intermittent factors in production of coal.

Hoover expressed keen interest in an announcement by J. L. Lewis, coal union leader, that the time is ripe for the miners and operators to get together.

Secretary of War John W. Weeks declared in an address at Western Reserve University that he was "greatly disturbed by the departure in recent years from the Government of the Constitution to other forms of Government which have a decided tendency toward complete social democracy. He said the Constitution meets with the needs of the country today as well as when it was written and declared amending it in its basic policy of government has been a failure. He added:

"We have in this country a large number of reformers, many of them professional reformers who are trying to reform anything and everything and offering panaceas guaranteed to cure all ailments of the body politic and many fancied ailments. A legislature should resist all such schemes to the point of being reactionary."

the Road to Health

Fulton, Arkansas.—"I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a soreness in my side.

I would suffer so badly every month from my waist down that I could not be on my feet half the time. I was not able to do my work without help. I saw your Vegetable Compound advertised in a newspaper and gave it a fair trial. Now I am able to do my work and don't even have a headache every month. I cannot praise your Vegetable Compound enough and highly recommend it to those who have troubles like mine. I am willing for these facts to be used as a testimonial to lead all who suffer with female troubles, as I did, to the right road to health."—Mrs. LULA VANN, Box 48, Fulton, Arkansas.

It is this sort of praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, given by word of mouth and by letter, one woman to another, that should cause you to consider taking this well-known medicine, if you are troubled with such symptoms as painful periods, weak, nervous feelings, miserable pains in your back, and cannot work at certain times.

Here is a woman who is so grateful and glad to be relieved from a painful and nerve-racking physical condition that she wishes to tell all sick women.

TO KEEP PHYSICALLY FIT

Every individual should have a thorough physical examination made by a physician at regular intervals, says General Sawyer, physician to President Harding, endorsing advice given before, but which cannot be reiterated too often.

When this practice is commonly adopted, Dr. Sawyer believes business men will direct their affairs in line with their physicians' advice. The physician of the future, he believes, will be paid "for keeping clients well rather than caring for them when they are sick." Under the system he advocates the word "client" instead of "patient" would seem to be decidedly the proper one to use. Writers about China have told us that physicians in the Flowery Kingdom operated on that plan long ago, but then China has a habit of coming forward every little while and claiming to have invented things and done much which has been considered quite modern.

A FOREST BOND ISSUE

In expressing approval of the proposal that the Commonwealth issue $25,000,000 of bonds and with the proceeds buy and reforest the 5,000,000 acres of "the Pennsylvania desert," the State Conservation Council, of which Dean Watts of the Pennsylvania State College is president, has expressed the same view which is taken of the project by all other bodies that have given it critical examination. The conclusion is general among those who have studied the subject that the bond issue not only would be a capital investment for the citizens but would provide benefits which cannot be obtained in any other way.

The proposition is this: There are 5,000,000 acres of barren land in the mountains in Pennsylvania which are fit for growing trees but are suitable for nothing else. This land was once covered with forests but reckless lumbering and fire have swept it bare. The owners will not plant it anew in forests because they do not care to wait 50 years or longer for a return on their investment. (It takes that long for a tree to reach sawlog size.) They are also dissuaded by the difficulty of preventing forest fires. The land can be bought for a few dollars an acre. The Commonwealth has bought more than a million acres of similar land at an average price of $2.28 an acre. Now if the state should buy and reforest the "desert" and protect it from forest fires, it is demonstrable that in 50 or 75 years it would yield an annual return greater than the entire amount now spent by the Commonwealth on public schools, while in 100 years the return would equal the total revenue which the state now receives from all sources. The figures have been carefully checked and submitted to foresters and lumbermen, who can find no flaw in them.

The question is if the people of Pennsylvania are willing to make an investment for their grandchildren.

TRINITY METHODIST CHURCH EVENTS

Yesterday was devoted to the children. With a large school that delighted Superintendent Arnold and turned to the Student Loan Fund $72.13, the program of the day was well started. Then came the formal exercises, which were carried out according to Saturday's schedule, Margaret Flegal's recitation being the only addition. A fine motif was revealed in the program. It began with growth in the flora, then in bird life, culminating in the training of the mind. The tribute to Wisdom closed with the liberation of mind from ignorance, the heart from superstition and the hands from the curse of the unskilled. Then came the quest of Truth. The greatest interest centered in the primary department numbers which were exceptionally rendered. The decorations were attractive and elegant. And the music by both orchestra, chorus and congregation of a superior order and strength.

The evening worship was marked by the presence of strangers and commercial travelers, who are responding to the invitation of Trinity church. The music, both instrumental and vocal, has seldom equalled that of last night. Anthem by chorus, selection by the quartette, duet by organ and piano, all combined to enrich the service. The exposition was taken from Isaiah 6: 1-8. This was illustrated from history, science and the laws of nature. And the application was made with a directness that held the attention of a congregation in which men outnumbered the women.

Ten infants were baptized and three adults. Two persons were received into Church membership.

This week's events: Monday, League cabinet, parsonage. Wednesday noon, joint picnic of the Women's Missionary societies, driving park, no matter what weather: evening mid-week congregational meeting, followed by monthly meeting of Sunday School board. Clearfield group of Charges meet Superintendent Fyler, 1 p. m. Friday Mr. Moore's class holds strawberry lawn fete, church; adjourned meeting of Trinity Men's organization for committee reports.—All men of the Sunday School and congregation expected to attend, Sunday afternoon.

HOME SADDENED

The home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Klme is saddened beyond words today owing to the death of little "Billie" Klme, grandson, who was summoned by the Great Lover of little children at an early hour yesterday. Little Billie was a bright little fellow with a host of friends among the little folks who attended the Market Street School. His death was caused by a severe case of scarlet fever and the ravages of the disease were such that no hope was held for his recovery from the first. The funeral was held on Locust Street at 12:30 today the services being in charge of Rev. L. S. Snell.

Not Particular.

A good naval yarn is told by "Windlass" in his cheerful book, "With the R. N. R." The officers of a patrol yacht were entertaining sweethearts and wives. Billy's introduction to Mr. Marshall by her husband was as follows: "This is my wife, Mrs. Marshall." "Delighted," cried the young subalternant enthusiastically, "delighted to meet any wife of yours."—York (England) Post

Ravages of the Gypsy Moth.

The gypsy moth was introduced in this country at Medford, Mass., in 1880, in connection with some experiments in hybridizing silkworms. A few specimens escaped, and about 20 years later the insect had become a serious pest. Between 1890 and 1900 the state of Massachusetts spent about $1,000,000 in combating the insect, which became scarce temporarily, but speedily resumed its depredations when the campaign against it was discontinued.

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 19.—A definite program to co-operative strike action by the rail unions and the miners' unions will be formulated at a conference between B. M. Jewell, representing the railroad workers unions and John L. Lewis, representing the miners. The terms will be submitted to a joint conference tomorrow night. Success of the proposed co-operative action demands that a specific plan be adopted by the conference. John L. Lewis said today they have agreed to say nothing in advance of the conference as to the recommendations they would jointly submit. It was indicated, however, that in the event of a strike on July 1st of the 1,200,000 rail workers the first step would be a refusal by the railroad workers to handle a pound of coal produced by non-union labor.

The Springs of Art.

The great human reservoirs, from which the world draws its masterpieces of art as thoughtlessly as it draws a cup of water from the faucet, are fed by many subterranean springs which flow spontaneously, freely, irresistibly, always giving, joyous to be giving, without price, but not without much cost to the owner.—William Gowes Downes.

Cellar is Safe.
Accident statistics show that the safest place to be to avoid the possibility of accident is in a bed in the cellar of your home. Next to that the safest place is a Pullman or other steel car on a railroad train. So say the accident insurance companies. A passenger in an ordinary railroad car is much safer than at home, because he is sitting still and few things can happen to him. If he is in a Pullman, and there is a collision, other cars may be smashed, but his own vehicle, being of steel and enormously heavy, will likely escape serious injury.

New York, June 19.—A killer is loose from Sing Sing. The whole countryside from Poughkeepsie to New York is engaged in a man hunt. State troopers guard every road while scores of men in posses are searching the woods in the vicinity of Ossining. Every cove along the Hudson has been searched and a state wide call has gone out to citizens and police to be on the watch for the fugitive. Mrs. Mary Hoover, a former resident of Bradford township, who has been living in Clearfield for several years, passed peacefully away at her home in the Fourth Ward Saturday morning at three o'clock after an illness of several months' duration. Mrs. Hoover was the widow of the late Anderson Hoover, of Bradford Township, and is survived by the following children: Wava, wife of Lloyd McDowell, of Clearfield; Victor, of Clearfield; Lloyd of Bradford Township; Clifford, of Spangler; Edgar, of DuBois; Sadie, wife of Hugh Milliken, of Clearfield, and Vera and Mildred at home.

Deceased was a member of the United Brethren church of the Fourth Ward and a woman exercising all the sterling qualities of womanhood and mother. She will be missed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances both here and in Bradford township where she formerly lived.

The funeral will be held from the home tomorrow, Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, with interment at Bradford cemetery.

Varnishing Airplanes.

It is contended that one feature of the airplane industry is more dangerous to workers than the actual work of flying the finished machines. The indoor varnishing of the linen wings in order to make them waterproof and airproof involves the use of fumes which are often fatal to life under certain conditions. The only safe place in which to do the varnishing appears to be out of doors.

Special Deputy Fox Is

Examination of Former
State Treasurer.

THAT IT ALRIGHT

Harrisburg, Pa., June 19.—Former State Treasurer Harmon M. Kephart testified in the hearing of the Treasury investigation here today that he had directed the transfer of State funds in and out of a bank during the close of one month and the beginning of the next so that the monthly statement would not show an over deposit. Edward J. Fox, Special Deputy Attorney General, in charge of the investigation for the Attorney General's Department, assumed charge of the questioning of Kephart. Kephart readily admitted under examination, that he gave orders to Oscar Klopp, now dead, to make transfers reducing excess deposits in certain banks. He denied authorizing the so-called "book transfers." Kephart said that up until the time of the investigation he supposed Klopp had made equal transfers. "I thought it was done right," he said. He said he had never examined the books to ascertain whether or not actual transfers were made. Mr. Klopp was one of the most efficient men in the department testified Kephart, in denying he had ever instructed the clerk to make book transfers. "I signed without reading the oath affixed to the agreement," Kephart said.

HUGHES PLEADS FOR SANE DISCUSSION OF NATION'S AFFAIRS

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 19.—The greatest difficulty at present in the country in the foreign relations lies in the untruthful, prejudice and inflammatory discussions in which some of our citizens and certain forms of the press permit themselves to indulge, Secretary of State Hughes said here today in a commencement day address at the University of Michigan. He characterized as the most dangerous enemy of the republic the demagogue and all his works. Hughes in an outline of the American foreign policy also urged that Cabinet members be allowed to appear on the floors of Congress to explain the affairs of their departments stating that such misunderstanding regarding foreign relations could be wiped out in this manner.

SEA TIGER CAUSES DEATH OF EXPERT FLORIDA SWIMMER

Tampa, Fla., June 19.—Terrors of a tiger of the sea kept bathers in Florida waters close to shore today following a tragedy in which Miss Doris McKatchie, a champion swimmer, was bitten by a barracuda shark. Miss Mary Buhner, companion of Miss McKatchie, is deserving of a Carnegie hero medal for her action in trying to save the life of her friend. She swam out to her assistance and held the dying girl in her arms after the shark had made its attack and inflicted two deep wounds in the girl's leg. The wounds proved fatal and she died in Miss Buhner's arms. The girls were swimming in the ship channel of Tampa Bay, off St. Petersburg. Both were expert swimmers and members of a champion swimming team.

STRIKE ORDER WILL GO OUT FOR JULY 1 SAY RAIL CHIEFS

Head Of The Miners'
Organization Adds A
Bit To The Turmoil In
The Industrial World.

NOTICE IS SERVED

Cincinnati, June 18.—Formal notice was served tonight on the Railway Labor Board by the chiefs of ten unions of the intention to go through with strike July 1, in event one is authorized by the 1,225,000 workers whose wages are to be reduced by orders of the Board.

Coupled apparently with the action of the rail union leaders was a statement made by John Lewis, leader of the striking coal miners who will meet with the rail union leaders on Tuesday to consider strike action. He apparently pledged the miners' aid to rail men but declined to state definitely what aid might result.

Cincinnati, June 18.—Withdrawal of wage reductions ordered by the rail road labor board and the taking back by railroads of contracts farming out shop work only can avert the threatened strike of approximately 1,000,000 workers on July 1, rail union executives said tonight.

Union leaders declared complete strike plans have been approved and unless the railroad labor board revokes its decision cutting wages, and altering conditions, the threatened strike will go into effect as scheduled.

The triple barreled strike vote of seven unions so far returned was announced by union leaders as being 98 per cent in favor of a walkout. However leaders said this percentage is high and they did not expect the final vote to reach more than 95 per cent.

Tuesday the rail and miners' union officials will meet to discuss "co-operative action" between members of these organizations. John L. Lewis, president of the miners, formally announced today that the meeting would discuss "industrial situation affecting the strike of organized mine workers and outrageous action of the United States Railway Labor Board in imposing unwarrantable and unjustified" (Continued on Page 5).

REDISTILLATION OF PATENT MEDICINES TROUBLES OFFICERS

Philadelphia, J.P., June 19.—(U. P.)—Illicit Boozing in this state is chiefly from two sources, according to State Prohibition Director Davis.

"There is no question that liquor is being smuggled here by boat and also illegally transported by truck and freight from other states," he said.

"But the most damnable source of it is the enormous shipments of 'Alcorub' and 'Alcosh' and other preparations containing more than 80 per cent alcohol, which is being sold indiscriminately in the market today. Boot leggers buy the poisonous alcohol in carload lots, re-distill it, and sell it for beverage purposes. 'We can handle the liquor withdrawn from distilleries and government bonded warehouses but the alcohol situation is out of our jurisdiction. This state is flooded with the poison rum, and the drinking public pays fabulous prices for colored alcohol. Poison lurks in every glass. Scientists tell us that it is impossible to remove all the poison through a re-distilling process.'

ALL LIQUORS WILL BE CONCENTRATED IN FEW BUILDINGS

Washington, D. C., June 19.—Orders for the concentration in a few warehouses of all liquors now held in three hundred and four warehouses throughout the country were issued today by Prohibition Commissioner Haynes. FREE J1eb .smay onKmbH

American Legion Band Should Be Supported By Every Loyal Citizen of Clearfield

Some few weeks ago a campaign was begun by friends of the American Legion Band to raise sufficient funds to pay some outstanding obligations and supply a maintenance fund for the band. Considerable work was done by the solicitors and a fair-sized sum of money and pledges were secured. The entire town was not covered and the committee propose completing their labors this week.

The American Legion Band is one of the very finest musical organizations to be found in Central Pennsylvania and is an institution which reflects great credit upon our town and should be appreciated by all Clearfielders. While organized by, and part of John Shade Post of the American Legion, the Legion should not be expected to share the burden of maintaining the band. It is a town institution and as such should be supported by the town. Nevertheless obligations of the band to the amount of $1500 have been assumed by the Legion and the campaign for finances were undertaken by some of our public spirited men for the purpose of taking this burden off the Legion and to give all the townspeople an opportunity to assist in supporting our band.

With the end in view of giving the supporters of the band proper recognition it was decided to make all contributors honorary members of the band. Honorary membership certificates were prepared and the fees for same were placed at $10, $25, $50 and $100. When the subscriber made his donation a certificate was issued of a denomination the amount of his contribution and this certificate denoting honorary membership was placed in a neat frame for delivery to the honorary member, the idea being to have the certificate displayed in office, business place or home, to show just who did appreciate having a good band in Clearfield, and who was willing to show their appreciation by helping to support it.

The expenses of the band are approximately $1500 per year and every person interested in the Legion and its institutions should be glad to have their names placed upon the honorary membership roll.

The committee will complete its labors this week, when a complete report will be given. If the solicitation to Russell Shaw, at Blacktowners have missed you send your floral store on Third street, where it will be properly recorded and the certificate of honorary membership supplied.

Bonus Must Wait Until Tariff Bill Passes, Committee Decides

Washington, D. C., June 19, 1922.—The fate of the soldier bonus at this session was today in the hands of fifty-nine Republican Senators who met in secret session to decide what action the upper house will take. Compromises between opposing forces practically assured indefinite delay at this session of Congress. It is understood that a majority has been swayed to the Administration view-point that the bonus must follow the tariff and that the former will surely be brought to a vote before fall.

Washington, D. C., June 19.—Soldier bonus legislation will not be considered until the tariff bill is disposed of, it was decided at a conference of Republican Senators today.

By a vote of thirty to nine the conference defeated a motion by Senator McCumber, North Dakota, Chairman of the Finance Committee, to lay aside the tariff and take up the bonus for immediate consideration.

After defeating McCumber's motion, however, the conference passed a resolution twenty-seven to eleven pledging to consider the bonus as soon as the tariff was completed.

COMMITTEE READY TO ENTERTAIN THE COMMERCIAL CLUB

The committee of the Commercial Club having in charge the dinner and entertainment for Ladies night which will be observed at the Dimeling this evening report everything in readiness for a wonderful social time. This is the first social event of the Commercial Club since its organization and with Doctor Frantz at its head it is bound to be one of the successes of the season.

The club now numbers almost one hundred members and judging from the way acceptances are rolling in, there will be almost one hundred per cent attendance this evening and the committee is preparing for it so members are urged to be there to do their duty by the chef.

CONGRESSMEN WANT TIME TO ACQUAINT NATION WITH PLAN

Washington, D. C., June 19.—A scientific and vigorous campaign to sell the ship subsidy to the country will be under way soon in case President Harding definitely consents, as he is asked to do this week to a postponement of action in the House Republican House Leaders said today that one of their main reasons for urging President Harding to delay legislation is to allow time for comprehensive advertising scheme to acquaint the voters with the need for the proposed financial aid to American shipbuilders.

The floor is being planed, polished and leveled and all who attend will be assured a good time.

UNUSUAL TRIBUTE IS PAID TO ROTHROCK, FATHER OF FORESTRY

Harrisburg, Pa., June 19.—(U. P.)—An unusual tribute was paid to the late Dr. Joseph Trimble Rothrock, first Forestry Commissioner of Pennsylvania, by the State Forest Commission in resolutions eulogizing his services to the State and to society.

In addition plans are being developed for placing memorials to Dr. Rothrock, including a medalion in the Department offices, a bust at the Forest Academy, and a monument in the public square of his birthplace, McVeytown, in Mifflin County.

The resolution says: "WHEREAS, Dr. Joseph Trimble Rothrock, the beloved father of Pennsylvania Forestry, has passed to his reward; and

"WHEREAS, it is fitting that his former colleagues on the Pennsylvania State Forest Commission give expression to their high appreciation of his long life of devotion to the cause of forest protection;

"RESOLVED, That the members of the Pennsylvania State Forest Commission, whose work was laid out and started by his genius and unselfish efforts, touched with a deep and lasting grief at his loss:

RESOLVED, That while the great leader is gone, his work in all its manifold phases will go unabated. His career as the founder of the Pennsylvania Forestry Department, as the first to propose the State outdoor treatment of tuberculosis, as the founder in this State of the outdoor camp and school movement; for boys as a discoverer of Pennington, as the discoverer of valuable formulas in surgery, as the reporter of new and rare specimens in botany, and natural history, and as an explorer and pathfinder, and also for his kindness, his approachable simplicity, and above all his splendid sincerity, have marked him as a man apart and a great soul, worthy of undying fame; this country can scarce part with his type.

Punxsutawney Curb Market Continues To Draw A Crowd

That the Punxsutawney curb market will eventually become an institution of established worth in Punxsutawney becomes more apparent each week says the Punxsutawney Spirit. Saturday's market brot out a large number of farmers and truck gardeners than any previous market and the number of purchasers was correspondingly large.

Fifteen stalls were occupied before the market opened this morning and before 8 o'clock practically every bit of produce offered for sale had been snapped up by eager buyers. Chickens, butter, eggs and garden produce of all kinds and one farmer who thought he was equipped for at least three hours of hard selling found himself bought out in less than an hour's time.

It has been suggested that the men who occupy stalls at the curb market Wednesday and Saturday of each week by some means indicate what they will have to offer at the next market. Now, anything will sell if it is good quality and the price is right but if the prospective purchaser were acquainted beforehand with what was to be offered for sale, the produce would in all probability move faster. Wednesday next will be the next day of the market, and more farmers are expected to be on hand than at any time since the market opened.

Robbers In Far West.

SLAYER IS CAUGHT

Salem and vicinity was greatly shocked and surprised on Saturday to hear of the tragedy surrounding the disappearance of Emma Wise, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Goodlander, well known residents of that vicinity. The telegram, apprising them of the death of their daughter came from the Hotel Tours, at Denver, Col., and told first of her disappearance, and later of the finding of her body, murdered. The last telegram also conveyed the news that the alleged slayer of the woman had been found and had made a partial confession of his crime.

The telegrams from the Hotel Tours at Denver, are as follows:

Denver, Col., June 16, 1922

C. H. Goodlander,

DuBois, Pa.

Your daughter, Emma Wise disappeared Tuesday at ten o'clock and no account of her since. Wired Alice Goodlander Wednesday asking her to wire us and come at once, but no results at this time. Wiring her again tonight. Wire us instructions and advice.

Emma Wise left her home in Salem last November for the purpose of opening a millinery establishment in Denver, Colo. This she did and was getting along very well, but recently word was received from her that she had sold out her store. While conducting the store the young lady had stopped at the Hotel Tours, and it is believed from the telegrams sent by the management that the motive for the crime was robbery. The details of the crime are not yet known.

Alice Goodlander referred to is a sister of the murdered woman, and she has gone to Denver from Split Rock, Wyoming, with the intention of bringing the remains back east for burial.

The deceased was very well known in Brady township and the bereaved parents will have the sympathy of a large number of friends throughout this section.

Mrs. Hiram Souders, of Albany, N. Y., is visiting relatives here.

I knew then, of course, that he meant I couldn't go on the sleigh ride, even though he hadn't said the words right out. I forgot all about being casual and indifferent and matter-of-course then. I thought only of showing them how absolutely necessary it was for them to let me go on that sleigh ride, unless they wanted my life forevermore hopelessly blighted.

I explained carefully how he was the handsomest, most popular boy in school, and how all the girls were just crazy to be asked to go anywhere with him; and I argued what if Father had seen him with boys he did not like—then that was all the more reason why nice girls like me, when he asked them, should go with him, so as to keep him away from bad boys. And I reminded them again that he was the very handsomest, most popular boy in school; and that there was a girl I knew who wouldn't be crazy to be in my shoes.

Then I stopped, all out of breath, and I can imagine just how pleading and palpitating I looked.

I thought Father was going to refuse right away, but I saw the glance that Mother threw him—the glance that said, "Let me attend to this, dear." I'd seen that glance before, several times, and I knew just what it meant; so I wasn't surprised to see Father shrug his shoulders and turn away as Mother said to me:

"Very well, dear. I'll think it over and let you know tonight."

But I was surprised that night to have Mother say I could go, for I'd about given up hope, after all that talk at the breakfast table. And she said something else that surprised me, too. She said she'd like to know Paul Mayhew herself; that she always wanted to know the friends of her little girl. And she told me to ask him to call the next evening and play checkers or chess with me.

Happy? I could scarcely contain myself for joy. And when the next evening came, bringing Paul, and Mother, all prettily dressed as if he were really, truly company, came into the room and talked so beautifully to him, I was even more entranced. To be sure, it did bother me a little that Paul laughed so much, and so loudly, and that he couldn't seem to find anything to talk about only himself, and what he was doing, and what he was going to do. Some way, he had never seemed like that at school. And I was afraid Mother wouldn't like that.

All the evening I was watching and listening with her eyes and her ears everything he did, everything he said. I so wanted Mother to like him! I so wanted Mother to see how really fine and splendid and noble he was. But that evening—why couldn't he stop talking about the prizes he'd won, and the big racing car he'd just ordered for next summer? There was nothing fine and splendid and noble about that. And were his finger nails always so dirty?

Why, Mother would think—Mother did not stay in the room all the time; but she was in more or less often to watch the game; and at half-past nine she brought in some little cakes and lemonade as a surprise. I thought it was lovely; but I could have shaken Paul when he pretended to be afraid of it, and asked Mother if there was a stick in it.

The idea—Mother! A stick! I just knew Mother wouldn't like that. But if she didn't, she never showed a thing in her face. She just smiled, and said no, there wasn't any stick in it; and passed the cakes.

When he had gone I remember I didn't like to meet Mother's eyes, and I didn't ask her how she liked Paul Mayhew. I kept right on talking fast about something else. Some way, I didn't want Mother to talk then, for fear of what she would say.

And Mother didn't say anything about Paul Mayhew—then. But only a few days later she told me to invite him again to the house (this time to a chafing-dish supper), and to ask Carrie Heywood and Fred Small, too. We had a beautiful time, only again Paul Mayhew didn't "show off" at all in the way I wanted him to—though he most emphatically "showed off" to his way! It seemed to me that he bragged even more about himself and his belongings than he had before. And I didn't like at all the way he ate his food. Why, Father didn't eat like that—with such a noisy mouth, and such a rattling of the silverware!

And so it went—wise mother that she was! Far from prohibiting me to have anything to do with Paul Mayhew, she let me see all I wanted to of him, particularly in my own home. She let me go out with him, properly chaperoned, and she never, by word or manner, hinted that she didn't admire his conceit and braggadocio.

And it all came out exactly as I suspect she had planned from the beginning. When Paul Mayhew asked to be my escort to the class reception in June, I declined with thanks, and immediately afterward told Fred Small I would go with him. But even when I told Mother nonchalantly, and with carefully averted eyes, that I was going to the reception with Fred Small—even then her pleasant "Well, that's good!" conveyed only cheery mother interest; nor did a hasty glance into her face discover so much as a lifted eyebrow to hint, "I thought you'd come to your senses sometime!"

Wise little mother that she was! In the days and weeks that followed (though nothing was said) I detected a subtle change in certain matters, however. And as I look back at it now, I am sure I can trace its origin to my "affair" with Paul Mayhew. Evidently Mother had no intention of running the risk of any more courtships; also evidently she intended to know who my friends were. At all events the old Anderson mansion soon became the rendezvous of all the boys and girls of my acquaintance. And such good times as we had, with Mother always one of us, and ever proposing something new and interesting!

And because boys—not a boy, but boys—were as free to come to the house as were girls, they soon seemed to me as commonplace and matter-of-course and free from sentimental interest as were the girls.

Again, wise little mother! But, of course, even this did not prevent my falling in love with some one older than myself, some one quite outside of my own circle of intimates. My especial attack of this kind came to me when I was barely eighteen, the spring I was being graduated from the Andersonville High school. And the visible embodiment of my adoration was the head master, Mr. Harold Hartshorn, a handsome, clean shaven, well-set-up man of (I should judge) thirty-five years of age, rather grave, a little stern, and very dignified.

But how I adored him! How I hung upon his every word, his every glance! How I maneuvered to win from him a few minutes' conversation on a Latin verb or a French translation! How I thrilled if he bestowed upon me one of his infrequent smiles! How I grieved over his stern aloofness!

By the end of a month I had evolved this: his stern aloofness meant that he had been disappointed in love! His melancholy was loneliness—his heart was breaking! How I longed to help to heal, to cure! How I thrilled at the thought of the love and companionship I could give him somewhere in a rose-embowered cottage far from the maddening crowd! (He boarded at the Andersonville hotel alone now.) If only he could see it as I saw it. If only by some sign or token he could know of the warm love that was his but for the asking! Could he not see that no longer need he pine alone and unappreciated in the Andersonville hotel? Why, in just a few weeks I was to be through school. And then—

On the night before commencement Mr. Harold Hartshorn ascended our front steps, rang the bell, and called for my father. I knew because I was upstairs in my room, over the front door; and I saw him come up the walk and heard him ask for Father.

Oh, joy! Oh, happy day! He knew. He had seen it as I saw it. He had come to gain Father's permission, that he might be a duly accredited suitor, for my hand! During the next ecstatic ten minutes, with my hand pressed against my wildly beating heart, I planned my wedding dress, selected with care and discrimination my trousseau, furnished the rose-embowered cottage far from the maddening crowd—and wondered why Father did not send for me. Then the slam of the screen door downstairs sent me to the window, a sickening terror within me.

Was he going—without seeing me, his future bride? Impossible!

Father and Mr. Harold Hartshorn stood on the front steps below, talking. In another minute Mr. Harold Hartshorn had walked away, and Father had turned back on to the piazza.

As soon as I could control my shaking knees, I went downstairs.

Father was in his favorite rocking-chair. I advanced slowly. I did not sit down.

"Was that Mr. Hartshorn?" I asked, trying to keep the shakiness out of my voice.

"Yes."

"Mr. H. Hartshorn," I repeated sturdily.

"Yes. He came to see me about the Downer place," nodded Father. "He wants to rent it for next year."

"To rent it—the Downer place!" (The Downer place was no rose-embowered cottage far from the maddening crowd! Why, it was big, and brick, and right next to the hotel! I didn't want to live there.)

"Yes—for his wife and family. He's going to bring them back with him next year," explained Father.

"His wife and family!" I can imagine about how I gasped out those four words.

"Yes. He has five children, I believe, and—"

But I had fled to my room.

After all, my recovery was rapid. I was in love with love, you see; not with Mr. Harold Hartshorn. Besides, the next year I went to college. And it was while I was at college that I met Jerry.

Jerry was a brother of my friend, Helen Weston. Helen's elder sister was a senior in that same college, and was graduated at the close of my freshman year. The father, mother and brother came on to the graduation. And that is where I met Jerry.

If it might be called meeting him. He lifted his hat, bowed, said a polite nothing with his lips, and an indifferent "Oh, some friend of Helen's," with his eyes, and turned to a radiant blonde senior at my side.

And that was all—for him. But for me—

All that day I watched him whenever opportunity offered; and I suspect that I took care that opportunity offered frequently. I was fascinated. I had never seen any one like him before. Tall, handsome, brilliant, at perfect ease, he plainly dominated every group of which he was a part. Toward him every face was turned—for he never seemed to know it. (Whatever his faults, Jerry is not conceited. I will give him credit for that!) To me he did not speak again that day. I am not sure that he even looked at me. If he did there must still have been in his eyes only the "Oh, some friend of Helen's," that I had seen at the morning introduction.

I did not meet him again for nearly a year; but that did not mean that I did not hear of him. I wonder if Helen ever noticed how often I used to get her to talk of her home and her family life; and how interested I was in her gallery of portraits on the mantel—there were two fine ones of her brother there.

Helen was very fond of her brother. I soon found that she loved to talk about him—if she had a good listener.

Needless to say she had a very good one in me.

Jerry was an artist, it seemed. He was twenty-eight years old, and already he had won no small distinction. Prizes, medals, honorable mention, and a special course abroad—all these Helen told me about. She told me, too, about the wonderful success he had just had with the portrait of a certain New York society woman. She said that it was just going to "make" Jerry; that he could have anything he wanted now—anything.

They Couldn't Know

Back in 1818 the greatest newspaper of the day, declared that the world had reached the limit of human expansion. It even went further, saying that there weren't enough supplies in the world to support further growth of population.

The mind of 1818 couldn't conceive of the miracles that human ingenuity would perform during the twentieth century. It couldn't imagine the wonders that would be wrought by new agricultural methods and modern manufacturing genius. It was ignorant of transportation as we know it, or the progressive sales methods of today. It could not see the vital part that would be played by advertising.

Even today there are some who fail to realize what an important factor advertising has become. Advertising is as much a part of today's life as electricity, anti-septic surgery or automobiles. It keeps us up-to-date on the many things we need in order to live profitable, happy and useful lives. It presents for our approval articles of all kinds and for all purposes. The requirements of each member of the family are met by advertised offers of good merchandise of proved value.

The advertisements save time, money and effort for those who read them and follow their guidance. They are practical guarantees of satisfaction.

Progress Job Work Always Satisfies

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

Union wages closed the war period at a level of 122 per cent above the level of 1909, according to a study made by the Department of Labor and now available to throw light upon this much controverted point.

The war period from the standpoint of union scales closed in 1921, because it was in that year that decrease in rates of pay began to be worked out between employers and employees. Until then wage scales experienced a continued increase. The year 1921, therefore, is regarded as the peak year, despite the fact that in the prices of commodities the peak was reached twelve months sooner.

Wages have been falling during the past few months.

Some Government officials and observers, regarded as foresighted, believe that wages will soon be turned again into increasing wage scales.

A shortage of workers is developing in many sections of the United States in some lines of endeavor. Not enough building mechanics can be found to do work required in New Jersey, some sections of New England and in large cities throughout the country. Automobile workers and machinists are in demand. Metal miners are needed in the Southwest. Wages have already begun to rise in these trades.

Experienced farm hands are at a premium in Central and Middle West and also in certain sections of new England.

Shortage of workers in these lines of work have developed directly into increased demand and increased production of the products in question. As prosperity develops for other lines of industry, a similar situation will result, it is forecast. Immigration, which formerly supplied the United States with a large supply of common labor, is now restricted and common labor is in demand. Some observers predict that this cause alone will result in great increases in all wage scales throughout the country. Not all observers are in agreement on this question.

The accepted view is that the outlook favors higher wages generally as prosperity develops.

It is interesting to note that the most substantial increase in wages, which resulted from the war, did not come in actual war years. Between 1914 and 1918 the average level of wages increased but 29 percent. It was between 1918 and 1921 that wages rose fastest and highest.

Coal miners are not getting a living wage, Secretary of Commerce Hoover declared last Thursday. Hoover said the irregularity of coal production left coal miners idle half the time, and said their earnings when computed on an annual basis reveals they are poorly paid.

This is the first time Hoover has lent endorsement to the miner's chief claim for consideration in their present fight with the operators.

Permanent settlement of the coal strike is impossible, Hoover declared until a basis of adjustment is reached that will eliminate the intermittent factors in production of coal.

Hoover expressed keen interest in an announcement by J. L. Lewis, coal union leader, that the time is ripe for the miners and operators to get together.

Secretary of War John W. Weeks declared in an address at Western Reserve University that he was "greatly disturbed by the departure in recent years from the Government of the Constitution to other forms of Government which have a decided tendency toward complete social democracy. He said the Constitution meets with the needs of the country today as well as when it was written and declared amending it in its basic policy of government has been a failure. He added:

"We have in this country a large number of reformers, many of them professional reformers who are trying to reform anything and everything and offering panaceas guaranteed to cure all ailments of the body politic and many fancied ailments. A legislature should resist all such schemes to the point of being reactionary."

MRS. LULA VANN
FULTON, ARK.

Suggests to Suffering Women
the Road to Health

Fulton, Arkansas.—"I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a soreness in my side. I would suffer so badly every month from my waist down that I could not be on my feet half the time. I was not able to do my work without help. I saw your Vegetable Compound advertised in a newspaper and gave it a fair trial. Now I am able to do my work and don't even have a headache every month. I cannot praise your Vegetable Compound enough and highly recommend it to those who have troubles like mine. I am willing for these facts to be used as a testimonial to lead all who suffer with female troubles, as I did, to the right road to health."—Mrs. LULA VANN, Box 48, Fulton, Arkansas.

It is this sort of praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, given by word of mouth and by letter, one woman to another, that should cause you to consider taking this well-known medicine, if you are troubled with such symptoms as painful periods, weak, nervous feelings, miserable pains in your back, and cannot work at certain times.

Here is a woman who is so grateful and glad to be relieved from a painful and nerve-racking physical condition that she wishes to tell all sick women.

TO KEEP PHYSICALLY FIT

Every individual should have a thorough physical examination made by a physician at regular intervals, says General Sawyer, physician to President Harding, endorsing advice given before, but which cannot be reiterated too often.

When this practice is commonly adopted, Dr. Sawyer believes business men will direct their affairs in line with their physicians' advice. The physician of the future, he believes, will be paid "for keeping clients well rather than caring for them when they are sick." Under the system he advocates the word "client" instead of "patient" would seem to be decidedly the proper one to use. Writers about China have told us that physicians in the Flowery Kingdom operated on that plan long ago, but then China has a habit of coming forward every little while and claiming to have invented things and done much which has been considered quite modern.

A FOREST BOND ISSUE

In expressing approval of the proposal that the Commonwealth issue $25,000,000 of bonds and with the proceeds buy and reforest the 5,000,000 acres of "the Pennsylvania desert," the State Conservation Council, of which Dean Watts of the Pennsylvania State College is president, has expressed the same view which is taken of the project by all other bodies that have given it critical examination. The conclusion is general among those who have studied the subject that the bond issue not only would be a capital investment for the citizens but would provide benefits which cannot be obtained in any other way.

The proposition is this: There are 5,000,000 acres of barren land in the mountains in Pennsylvania which are fit for growing trees but are suitable for nothing else. This land was once covered with forests but reckless lumbering and fire have swept it bare. The owners will not plant it anew in forests because they do not care to wait 50 years or longer for a return on their investment. (It takes that long for a tree to reach sawlog size.) They are also dissuaded by the difficulty of preventing forest fires. The land can be bought for a few dollars an acre. The Commonwealth has bought more than a million acres of similar land at an average price of $2.28 an acre. Now if the state should buy and reforest the "desert" and protect it from forest fires, it is demonstrable that in 50 or 75 years it would yield an annual return greater than the entire amount now spent by the Commonwealth on public schools, while in 100 years the return would equal the total revenue which the state now receives from all sources. The figures have been carefully checked and submitted to foresters and lumbermen, who can find no flaw in them.

The question is if the people of Pennsylvania are willing to make an investment for their grandchildren.

TRINITY METHODIST CHURCH EVENTS

Yesterday was devoted to the children. With a large school that delighted Superintendent Arnold and turned to the Student Loan Fund $72.13, the program of the day was well started. Then came the formal exercises, which were carried out according to Saturday's schedule, Margaret Flegal's recitation being the only addition. A fine motif was revealed in the program. It began with growth in the flora, then in bird life, culminating in the training of the mind. The tribute to Wisdom closed with the liberation of mind from ignorance, the heart from superstition and the hands from the curse of the unskilled. Then came the quest of Truth. The greatest interest centered in the primary department numbers which were exceptionally rendered. The decorations were attractive and elegant. And the music by both orchestra, chorus and congregation of a superior order and strength.

The evening worship was marked by the presence of strangers and commercial travelers, who are responding to the invitation of Trinity church. The music, both instrumental and vocal, has seldom equalled that of last night. Anthem by chorus, selection by the quartette, duet by organ and piano, all combined to enrich the service. The exposition was taken from Isaiah 6: 1-8. This was illustrated from history, science and the laws of nature. And the application was made with a directness that held the attention of a congregation in which men outnumbered the women.

Ten infants were baptized and three adults. Two persons were received into Church membership.

This week's events: Monday, League cabinet, parsonage. Wednesday noon, joint picnic of the Women's Missionary societies, driving park, no matter what weather: evening mid-week congregational meeting, followed by monthly meeting of Sunday School board. Clearfield group of Charges meet Superintendent Fyler, 1 p. m. Friday Mr. Moore's class holds strawberry lawn fete, church; adjourned meeting of Trinity Men's organization for committee reports.—All men of the Sunday School and congregation expected to attend, Sunday afternoon.

HOME SADDENED

The home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Klme is saddened beyond words today owing to the death of little "Billie" Klme, grandson, who was summoned by the Great Lover of little children at an early hour yesterday. Little Billie was a bright little fellow with a host of friends among the little folks who attended the Market Street School. His death was caused by a severe case of scarlet fever and the ravages of the disease were such that no hope was held for his recovery from the first. The funeral was held on Locust Street at 12:30 today the services being in charge of Rev. L. S. Snell.

Not Particular.

A good naval yarn is told by "Windlass" in his cheerful book, "With the R. N. R." The officers of a patrol yacht were entertaining sweethearts and wives. Billy's introduction to Mr. Marshall by her husband was as follows: "This is my wife, Mrs. Marshall." "Delighted," cried the young subalternant enthusiastically, "delighted to meet any wife of yours."—York (England) Post

Ravages of the Gypsy Moth.
The gypsy moth was introduced in this country at Medford, Mass., in 1880, in connection with some experiments in hybridizing silkworms. A few specimens escaped, and about 20 years later the insect had become a serious pest. Between 1890 and 1900 the state of Massachusetts spent about $1,000,000 in combating the insect, which became scarce temporarily, but speedily resumed its depredations when the campaign against it was discontinued.

able reductions upon railway employees.

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 19.—A definite program to co-operative strike action by the rail unions and the miners' unions will be formulated at a conference between B. M. Jewell, representing the railroad workers unions and John L. Lewis, representing the miners. The terms will be submitted to a joint conference tomorrow night. Success of the proposed co-operative action demands that a specific plan be adopted by the conference. John L. Lewis said today they have agreed to say nothing in advance of the conference as to the recommendations they would jointly submit. It was indicated, however, that in the event of a strike on July 1st of the 1,200,000 rail workers the first step would be a refusal by the railroad workers to handle a pound of coal produced by non-union labor.

The Springs of Art.
The great human reservoirs, from which the world draws its masterpieces of art as thoughtlessly as it draws a cup of water from the faucet, are fed by many subterranean springs which flow spontaneously, freely, irresistibly, always giving, joyous to be giving, without price, but not without much cost to the owner.—William Gowes Downes.

Cellar is Safe.
Accident statistics show that the safest place to be to avoid the possibility of accident is in a bed in the cellar of your home. Next to that the safest place is a Pullman or other steel car on a railroad train. So say the accident insurance companies. A passenger in an ordinary railroad car is much safer than at home, because he is sitting still and few things can happen to him. If he is in a Pullman, and there is a collision, other cars may be smashed, but his own vehicle, being of steel and enormously heavy, will likely escape serious injury.

Harvey Indicted For Aiding The Sinn Fein

Trenton, N. J., June 19.—Charged with conspiracy to ship guns to Ireland Colonel Marcellus H. Thompson son-in-law of George Harvey, Ambassador to Great Britain, has been indicted by the Federal grand jury here. Seven other men were indicted at the same time. The indictment was returned several months ago by the grand jury, which was in session from January to April, and charges of conspiracy to violate the neutrality laws by shipping 405 machine guns on the steamer East Side for use by the Sinn Fein were made. The report of the grand jury has been kept secret for some time in order to give the authorities an opportunity to investigate the charges.

Mrs. Mary Hoover, a former resident of Bradford township, who has been living in Clearfield for several years, passed peacefully away at her home in the Fourth Ward Saturday morning at three o'clock after an illness of several months' duration. Mrs. Hoover was the widow of the late Anderson Hoover, of Bradford Township, and is survived by the following children: Wava, wife of Lloyd McDowell, of Clearfield; Victor, of Clearfield; Lloyd of Bradford Township; Clifford, of Spangler; Edgar, of DuBois; Sadie, wife of Hugh Milligan, of Clearfield, and Vera and Mildred at home.

Deceased was a member of the United Brethren church of the Fourth Ward and a woman exercising all the sterling qualities of womanhood and mother. She will be missed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances both here and in Bradford township where she formerly lived.

The funeral will be held from the home tomorrow, Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, with interment at Bradford cemetery.

Varnishing Airplanes.

It is contended that one feature of the airplane industry is more dangerous to workers than the actual work of flying the finished machines. The indoor varnishing of the linen wings in order to make them waterproof and airproof involves the use of fumes which are often fatal to life under certain conditions. The only safe place in which to do the varnishing appears to be out of doors.
